To JUNIPERO SERRA - Dedicated by Josephine Mildred Blanch

*The Vision stayed! Deep in his soul it stirred,
Stirring to high desire his martyr blood;
Bidding him go and seek and dare
And e'en as One he loved, to suffer all.*

*To this new world he came, and on its broad expanse,
By sapphire waters touching golden sands,
Built his city, finely wrought
Of Spirit-fire and selfless Love and Dream.*

Meeting to Discuss Coast Road Matters

A PUBLIC mass meeting has been called for next Monday evening July 24th, at the Monterey Theatre to consider questions in connection with the Carmel-San Simeon State Highway. It is planned to put all of the present facts directly before the citizens of the peninsula in order to set at rest the various rumors concerning the road. It is desired to have all possible encouragement given to speed up the work of building the road. The citizens are therefore urged to take an interest and attend this meeting.

The committee representing the Monterey peninsula in the matter of the new coast road designated in the State Highway bond issue as the Carmel-San Simeon road, held a meeting at the Hotel Del Monte early this month and went over the various problems incident to securing the speedy completion of the road. The new coast highway when completed will extend from Carmel to San Luis Obispo, and will connect up with the proposed skyline boulevard from San Francisco to Santa Cruz. It will make one of the most beautiful scenic automobile drives to be found any place and at the same time will relieve the present congestion on the valley routes.

Frederick MacMurray to Appear in Concert

On Friday evening, July 28th, Frederick MacMurray will give a concert at Arts and Crafts Hall. There will also be several assisting artists of well known ability.

Mr. MacMurray has been a resident of Carmel for some time and has been generous with his talent whenever matters of public interest demanded. It would be equally generous on the part of the public to patronize the concert liberally.

It is always a treat to listen to so gifted a violinist as MacMurray. He will play a number of his own composition and improvisations, and the evening should be a delight to all fortunate enough to attend.

Proclamation

Whereas, Saturday, the twenty-second day of July, has been designated as Serra Day and set aside as a public holiday by the Trustees of Carmel-by-the-Sea; and

Whereas, Serra Day comes in the midst of Carmel's three-day Serra Festival which is to be celebrated on the twenty-first, the twenty-second and the twenty-third of July by the first production on any stage of Garnet Holme's Carmel Mission Play entitled "Serra"; and

Whereas, Serra Day is to be signalized by the unveiling of Jo Mora's Serra shrine and statue in Serra Circle of Carmel Woods;

Now, Therefore, do I, Perry Newberry, President of the Board of Trustees of Carmel-by-the-Sea, exhort and most insistently urge all good citizens of Carmel to make the Serra Festival the most successful effort of all our community undertakings; and to that end I proclaim the will of the Board of Trustees, as follows:

That the good citizens of Carmel decorate their places of business on Ocean Avenue with the national colors and the red and yellow of Spanish California, beginning Thursday, the twentieth of July;

That the good citizens of Carmel show by their attendance in the Forest Theatre a proper appreciation of the artistic strivings embodied in the preparation and production of the Carmel Mission Play;

That the good citizens of Carmel observe the letter and the spirit of the holiday proclaimed for Saturday, July 22, by doing all honor on that day to the memory of that great "Servant of Christ, adventurer, architect, engineer," Padre Junipero Serra, the founder of Carmel Mission and of our community; and in particular,

That the good citizens of Carmel assemble at the Soldiers' Memorial Fountain at half after one in the afternoon of Serra Day to receive the Serra statue as it is conveyed to Carmel from the Mission, and to join with our distinguished guests in escorting it to Carmel Woods where it will be unveiled with fitting ceremony by the Rev. Raymond Mestres of Monterey and Carmel.

Signed:

PERRY NEWBERRY,

President Board of Trustees, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Musical at Mission Tea House

The hosts of the Mission Tea House gave the first of a series of concerts at their quaint old Adobe last Friday afternoon. It was at the time of afternoon tea and the dainty refreshments which they served between the musical numbers was one of the delightful features of the occasion.

Frederick MacMurray was the soloist and his instrument was the viola. He played many of his own compositions, among them the little Lullaby, which he has but lately composed. He also gave several improvisations.

Many of Carmel's real music-lovers entertained their friends and the afternoon was marked with informality and a rare musical appreciation. Most popular of Mr. MacMurray's offerings were his groups of the old songs, which he plays with a tenderness and a simplicity not always found in concert artists.

Among those present were Mesdames Ralph Harrison, Sidney Joseph, Lottie Shipley, C. S. Stanton, Louis Mullgart, E. W. Schaffer, A. A. Schoupp, E. A. Kluegel, Alfred Fraser, Arnold Waybur, Calvert Meade, Daniel Willard, Mr. and Mrs. Festus Lewis, Mrs. Bishop, Mrs. Wheatley, Miss Catherine Morgan, Mrs. Reese, Miss Raymond, Miss Eleanor Davenport, Miss Grace McKinstry, Misses N. N. Power, Kate Matheson, and M. J. Wilson of Palo Alto, Mrs. Eda Brunin, and Mrs. A. Breuner.

During the balance of this month and all of August the Seideneck house on Eighth avenue will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Malone of Stockton.

Ira Remsen's Play Selected for August

"INCHLING," a children's play, by Ira Remsen, talented artist and author, will be produced at our Forest Theatre next month—so the directors of the theater have decided.

This play was written by Mr. Remsen for the Settlement House in New York and has been enacted many times by children of different nationalities and tongues. Since then it has been expanded into a three act play, and will be made appropriate to the natural beauty of the Forest Theatre stage and surroundings.

Miss Blanche Tolmie, who is not unfamiliar to Carmel play-goers will produce the drama.

Special features of the drama will be the original and artistic costumes and scenery designed by Mr. Remsen himself. The cast will consist of practically all resident performers, and it is anticipated that this play will be one of the most successful artistically and financially of any produced in our open-air theater.

Polo and Golf at Hotel Del Monte

Polo is vying with golf in providing diversion and interest for the many visitors now at Del Monte and Pebble Beach. The feature of polo during the summer months is something new in California and has proven quite popular. There are three or four teams that turn out on the Del Monte polo fields over the week-ends and while the matches are in the form of schooling green ponies and developing new players they provide much excitement for the spectators who line the side-boards. Major Max Fleischmann of Santa Barbara is among the players. He shipped up his string of ponies and intends to spend the summer here himself with Mrs. Fleischmann. The Major sailed up from Santa Barbara in his yacht "Haida", which is now anchored in Stillwater Cove at Pebble Beach. Willie Crocker, Harry Hunt, Dick Schwerin and Lawrence McCreery are among the young players from San Mateo who are participating in the polo playing. Samuel F. B. Morse, Eric Pedley, Hugh Drury and the officers of the Monterey Presidio are also taking part.

For God and Humanity

The annual drive of the Salvation Army is coming Saturday afternoon. Their appeal should not be disregarded. In their quiet way they do much for those who are suffering spiritually or physically. The local Elks are assisting them. Be ready with your offering and give them a word of encouragement and a smile along with it.

Two mighty blasts from the town siren last Thursday afternoon called our fireman to a brush fire in the vicinity of the Mackenzie home down near the sand dunes. The conflagration was quickly brought under control. The fire was outside the city limits.

Persons and Products of Pen and Palette

Miss Jean Brainard is new from Santa Fe, N. M., where she is director of a school. Her local friends are calling on her on north Monte Verde street.

Among the well-known visitors in Carmel at present is "Eddie" O'Day. He has the reputation of being one of the best feature and editorial writers in the country. He is "The Clubman" in an Oakland paper.

Rev. D. Charles Gardner is in Carmel with his family for the summer. He will take part in the Serra play. He appeared last on our Forest Theater stage in Mary Austin's wonderful production, "Fire."

Besides being a painter of note, Ira Remsen, whose play, "Inchling," goes on at the Forest Theater next month, has had considerable stage experience, his most notable connection having been with the Provincetown players.

Ralph Waldo Trine, well-known author of New York, is at the Highlands with his family for two or three weeks. He is the author of "In Tune With the Infinite." Mrs. Trine is a dramatic reader of note. Her insight into the works she interprets and her expressive voice combine to make her an interesting entertainer.

Mrs. Robert Royce (Bianca Conte) and her son are guests of the David Albertos. Robert Royce is a prominent Socialist, and was associated with Jack London and Herman Whitaker. Mrs. Royce has a gallery in the Studio Building in San Francisco.

The Misses Marian Thanhauser and Harriet Allison have returned to Berkeley after a month's stay in Carmel. Miss Thanhauser has been engaged this summer in writing lyrics and short stories. Miss Allison is making a study of phonetics, linguistics, etc., and is a student of languages as well.

Professor Henry David Grey, teacher of English at Stanford, is on a year's sabbatical leave. He, with his wife and children, Dorothy and Sydney, left Carmel last week. They purpose spending the greater part of the year in Europe, where Prof. Grey will collect material for his literary work. He has lately finished a book on English literature for the American College society.

While it is generally known that Katharine Edson is here primarily for the Serra play, some side lights on her ability as a dancer will be of interest. She has been engaged as solo dancer for the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, under Hertz, and will be with that organization when they play in the Hollywood Bowl early next month.

Miss Edson is to dance next week in the Greek Theatre at Berkeley, but before she leaves Carmel we will have an opportunity of seeing her dance. The hosts of the Mission Tea House have engaged Miss Edson to dance there Saturday afternoon. The affair will be in the nature of a garden party, and Miss Edson's stage will be the beautiful rock-paved patio.

Several impromptu concerts have been given lately at the Highlands by guests, among them being Mrs. D. C. Lawton, Mrs. Marie Partridge Price and C. Allen Lewis. All three are noted musicians of the bay section.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Utman and son of New York are spending the summer at the Highlands. Mrs. Utman is a writer of children's fairy tales, and will probably do some work while on her vacation.

Prof. Blum of the Sociology department of the University of California, is to be in Carmel until October. He is engaged at present in getting out a book on his branch of science. He is accompanied by his wife and family.

J. C. Argens, cartoonist on the San Francisco Call, is spending some time at the Highlands. He is accompanied by his wife.

LATE ITEMS

Mrs. E. J. Foster and Mrs. H. P. Glassell are in Berkeley. They have enrolled in the university summer school course in textiles and weaving.

Mrs. Joseph G. Hooper entertained about fifty guests at a tea on Tuesday afternoon at her very attractive home on south Camino Real.

Miss Ruth Catlin, who conducts a school for young ladies in Portland, Ore., is the summer guest of Mrs. A. H. Schreff.

Contractor Percy Parkes has been awarded the contract to build the new unit for Sunset School, his bid—$2500—being the lowest. The work of grading the grounds will be done by Otey & Ramsey.

When Jack Jordan returns from his vacation he will be the proud possessor of a motor. He went away for a visit, but now that he is out of the parental clutch, he writes that he has gone to work in a Suisun cannery and that he's not coming home until he has earned the price of a motorcycle. It's evident that all wealthy men don't spoil their boys.

The business men's committee, consisting of Robert Leidig, Calvius C. Hogle and John B. Jordan, urge all Carmelites to comply with that part of the Newberry proclamation which refers to decorations for the Serra festival. They point out the propriety of draping all motor cars in accordance with the general scheme of decoration for the ceremonies of Serra Day.

William T. Kibbler, chairman of the committee on automobiles and traffic for the dedication ceremonies on Serra Day, requests all residents of Carmel who feel that they can do so without inconvenience, to place their automobiles at the disposal of the reception committee, beginning noon of Saturday, Serra Day. Due acknowledgement will be made of this courtesy. Those who wish to cooperate in this matter will please leave their names at the Pine Cone office.

MISSION DAYS RELIVED IN PAGEANT - DRAMA

Serra is dust for a hundred years,
Dust are the ladies and lords of Spain—
Safe from sorrow and change and tears,
Where the grass is clean with the springtide rain.

Serra is dust indeed, but his memory is immortal. The dust of the great padre mingles with Mother Earth in Carmel Mission, the spot of all earthly spots that he loved the best; but his immortal memory lives in the hearts of all true Carmelites, and to keep that memory green, to make it an inspiration, a motive of high endeavor, Carmel's Serra Festival is celebrated this week with poetry and drama, with music and sculpture and pageantry.

The Serra Festival reaches its high point on Saturday, our officially proclaimed holiday of Serra Day. On the afternoon of Serra Day there will be a pageant of profound significance, a pageant that will hark back in historical association to the colorful and meaningful processions of medieval Europe.

Pageantry is perhaps the most appealing artistic expression of community life. The growth of pageantry in California is a fact whose importance has not been properly appreciated. It represents the community striving toward ideality, the community's eagerness for the joy of life, the general recognition on the part of the community that business with its quite justifiable aims of prosperity and worldly success is not enough to satisfy the nature of man. Pageantry is a community gesture of beauty.

Pageantry in the United States probably began, on an elaborate plan at least, with the New Orleans Mardi Gras. That famous festival is the instinctive utterance of an exuberant, high-spirited people. It is the lineal descendant of the carnivals with which Rome and Venice say their passionate "farewell to the flesh" on the Fat Tuesday that precedes the penitential season of Lent. The New Orleans Mardi Gras concentrates in one marvelous fiesta the essence of all that makes life joyous not only for the Delta City but for all the Southern States. The New Orleans Mardi Gras has done more than statesmen could do for the spiritual emancipation of the South and its solidification in the affections of all true Americans.

In California we are today the heirs of a splendid Latin tradition. "Dust are the ladies and lords of Spain"; but their spacious days of hospitality and ceremonial courtesy are not forgotten in California. Our lives are informed with the spirit that breathed over this favored region "before the Gringos came", the fragrance of the old ways still lingers.

It is therefore quite natural—indeed it is inevitable—that we of California should seek release from the clutch of workaday by invoking the beneficent white magic of pageantry.

San Francisco did it in the Portola Festival whose pageantry was grouped around the personalities of Don Gaspar de Portola and the band of swashbuckling conquistadores. The success of that festival overwhelmed the most optimistic anticipations, so much so that there is a movement afoot right now to revive the Portola and make it a recurrent event, like the New Orleans Mardi Gras.

Sacramento recently threw itself heart and soul into a great pageant of Golden State Days, with the result that for the first time since the admission of this State to the Union, Northern California became conscious of the treasures of historic material that have lain rusting from disuse. There is quite a new feeling in Northern California since the Sacramento festival. That particular pageantry brought a huge domain to the realizing sense of its inherent charm.

Southern California has its pageants, of course. The Rose Carnival of Pasadena is famous. When the pilgrim-worshippers salute the rising sun of Easter Sunday from the heights of Rubidoux, the fame thereof is bruited about the world.

Pageant-drama is an art-form that has been perfected in California. The annual Bohemian Club play presented in the magnificent redwood grove belonging to the club on the banks of the Russian River in Sonoma County has had an influence on outdoor stagecraft that cannot be overestimated. The Bohemian Club's ceremony of the Cremation of Care has inspired a distinctive literature.

The Mountain Play on Tamalpais, intimately associated with the Californian career of our own Garnet Holme, has also made an original contribution to the development of pageantry. So has the Greek Theatre at the University of California.

It is no exaggeration to say that you cannot write the history of modern pageantry without devoting several very important chapters to California.

Carmel-by-the-Sea has its own traditions of pageantry, too well known to be chronicled here. It is better to emphasize the fact that Carmel is this week enriching its record of artistic achievement with something quite new in pageantry. Quite new, that is, insofar as California or the United States is concerned. The pageantry of Serra Day relates itself to the processional pageantry that was common in the Middle Ages, but is only seen nowadays in Southern Europe and in Latin America.

The pageant of Serra Day grew naturally from a problem that presented itself for solution. It was a practical problem, and Carmel proceeded to solve it, quite characteristically, on artistic lines.

When it was communicated to the Town Trustees and the Town Planning Commission that the Del Monte Properties Company proposed to include a carfour in their new subdivision of Carmel Woods, to name it Serra Circle, and to place there a shrine to the immortal Padre Junipero, the quick imagination of this whole community kindled at the news.

The fact that the projectors of Carmel Woods had commissioned our own Jo Mora to design the shrine indicated that the Del Monte Properties Company had an adequate appreciation of the artistic demands of such a work. Jo is par excellence the Serra sculptor. His Serra sarcophagus now nearing completion, is his masterpiece.

For the shrine in Carmel Woods Mora visualized a wooden statue surmounting a rock base. The work was all done in his studio immediately adjoining the Mission Carmelo.

How to transport the statue from the studio to Carmel Woods? That was the practical problem that had to be solved. Carmel rose to the occasion with an artistic inspiration. Let the statue be transported in pageant-procession!

And so the pageant of Serra Day took form under the direction of Garnet Holme, a master of pageantry. The ceremony will take travelers across the world to Lourdes in the Bas-Pyrenees where such pageant-processions are not infrequent, and to the mountain towns of the South American Andes where they are a picturesque feature of that sultry, colorful life, as the readers of Blasco Ibanez' short stories may remember.

The plan is to mount the statue on an ancient carreta of the Spanish-American days. The carreta will be in charge of a driver costumed like an Indian neophyte of eighteenth-century Carmel. It will be accompanied by a monastic guard of honor in the dress of the Franciscan Order, and escorted by a detail of cavalry troopers from the Presidio of Monterey. The Presidio military band will play as the pageant-procession advances from the Mission to the town.

When the statue reaches the Soldiers' Memorial Fountain, there will be a halt while the assembled multitude salutes it with song. Then the procession will move through Carmel, followed by the singing throng, and will make its way to Serra Circle in Carmel Woods.

the shrine of his great predecessor.

Governor Stephens has been invited by the Town Trustees to be the orator of the occasion. Invitations to the speaker's platform have also been extended to the governing bodies of Monterey, Pacific Grove, Salinas, San Juan, Watsonville, Santa Cruz, Jose, Gilroy, Hollister, Santa Clara and King City.

Nothing like this pageant-procession has been seen in California for at least a hundred years. Nothing just like it is apt to be seen again for a long, long time, unless the precedent spurs some other community to imitation. It is a distinct addition to Carmel's rich treasury of unique achievement. It will be long remembered by those that see it, living in the mind as a vital bit of symbolism. It will bring Padre Serra a little closer to our consciousness, and it will provide the proper mental background for the ceremony in Serra Circle of Carmel Woods when California will acquire its loveliest shrine to the "servant of Christ, adventurer, artist and engineer".

The Carmel Mission Swallows

By George Sterling.

When the mating-time of the lark is near
And down in the meadow the blackbirds swing,
They come with the music and youth of the year,
Sure as the blossoms' tryst with spring.

When willow and alder don their leaves,
Up from the cloudy south they fare,
To flit all day by the Mission eaves
And build their nests in the shadow there.

O'er field and meadow, a restless throng,
They dart and swoop till the west is red,
Swift of wing and chary of song,
That the eggs be hatched and the nestlings fed.

Serra sleeps within sound of the sea,
And the flock he fathered is long since still.
Over their graves the wind blows free
Prowls, and the quail calls over the hill.

Serra is dust for a hundred years,
Dust are the ladies and lords of Spain—
Safe from sorrow and change and tears,
Where the grass is clean with the springtide rain.

Meekly they slumber, side by side,
Cross and sword to the furrow cast,
Done forever with love and pride,
And sleep, as ever, the best at last.

But over the walls that the padres laid,
The circling swallows come and go,
Still by the seasons undismayed,
Or the storms above or the dead below.

The sales office will be on the ground, with Byington Ford of the Del Monte Properties Company in charge.

In order that purchasers may have no trouble locating the home sites that appeal to them, the lots have all been staked and marked in conformity with the large map distributed widely in advance of the opening. Copies of this map will be available on the grounds, and may be had now in any of the real estate offices in Carmel.

To reach Carmel Woods, go by the County Highway, by San Carlos or Monte Verde street, or by Second Avenue, (the Pebble Beach Gate).

Adequate parking accommodations will be provided for motor cars.

The opening sale coincides with our big Serra Festival featuring in the presentation of Garnet Holme's Carmel Mission Play of "Serra" in the Forest Theatre, so there is bound to be a huge crowd in attendance.

Visitors From Asilomar

The "Stuck-Ups" of Asilomar, on a recent Saturday, paid a visit to Carmel. Who are the "Stuck-Ups?" They are a group of up-and-coming college girls who are wont to foregather at Asilomar every year to do the work on the Conference grounds during the summer. They are chosen from the Young Women's Christian associations in the colleges and universities of California, Nevada and Arizona, one or two coming from each institution. They are employed in the office, tents, dining hall and store during the season. They live in the "House of Happiness," which is perched on the hill back of the administration building.

It was a gala day for the "Stuck-Ups"—for they had plenty of play mixed in with the work. A lot of them piled into the big truck and went for a picnic to Carmel. On Monday another group of "Stuck-Ups" made the same trip.

If you are captured by the spell of Carmel-by-the-Sea and would like to make it your home, your opportunity presents itself in Carmel Woods on July 22 and 23.

Perhaps you have been drawn to this lovely region by its healthful climate, its scenic beauty, its romantic Mission history, its atmosphere of culture—and yet have felt that your dream of owning a Carmel home would never become a reality.

But Carmel Woods expands the boundaries of Carmel-by-the-Sea, and will make it possible for you to have your dream come true.

One hundred and nineteen homesites will be offered for sale in Carmel Woods beginning July 22 and 23.

Carmel Woods, immediately adjoining Carmel-by-the-Sea, is a residence subdivision in a noble grove of virgin pines and oaks. It has broad, winding roads that make every home-site accessible yet secluded. Electricity and abundant water are brought to every lot.

Of the 119 home-sites in Carmel Woods, forty-nine lots—size 40x100 feet, are priced at $350 each.

Of the remaining seventy-lots, eleven are priced at $400, two at $500, one at $550, five at $600, twelve at $700, one at $750, nine at $800, four at $850, two at $900, one at $950, three at $1,000, one at $1,100, one at $1,200, fifteen at $1,500, one at $2,000, and one at $5,000. Variation in price is due to variation in size.

Maps may be had on request.

Terms—Twenty per cent down, the balance in easy payments.

The sale begins on the grounds, July 22 and 23.

There have been nine additions to Carmel-by-the-Sea within the past few years and prices of home-sites have advanced steadily as Carmel grew. These Carmel Woods prices may never be quoted when Carmel grows again.

TIME IS SHORT

The primary is the initiative in governmental affairs. It is the vehicle by which the electorate is most effective in choosing suitable candidates for public office. It is the duty of every citizen to take part in the primaries. In order to do so it is necessary to register before July 29—in the next ten days—thirty days before election.

LOCAL SUPPORT MEANS SUCCESS

The importance of Carmel's three big Serra days and nights this week-end is emphasized by the action of the railroad company in making special three day passenger rates from San Francisco bay and other points. As this affair is to be an annual event, it is important that the initial venture have unanimous local support.

REAL SERVICE

The prime factor in the success of the California cantaloupe industry is the care with which the fruit is handled, packed and transported. From the time the plants make their appearance and little caps or sun-bonnets are placed over each embryonic melon to protect it from the heat, to the time of loading it into the cars, every precaution, born of years of scientific study in production and handling, is exercised. Producers of other commodities, take notice.

"Mind in the Making"—A Counter Critique

By Gwendolen Perry

We wonder whether Mr. James Harvey Robinson's "The Mind in the Making" would not soon become a best seller could its author often give talks as charming as the one that interested so many of us on the night of July 7. The substance of that talk has already been fairly reviewed in Mr. Worthington's able article of last week; the above mentioned curiosity arises from a reaction quite different from Mr. Worthington's to Mr. Robinson's attitude toward his material. Not only did we fail to identify this material as "dry bones"; we failed also to find the author himself undazzled. Without heat he spoke, yes, but because of that all the more effectively. Genially, rather than gloomily, he flung us his propositions. "Now irony is seriousness without solemnity. It assumes that man is a serio-comic animal and that no treatment of his affair can be appropriate which gives him a consistency and dignity which he does not possess." This, Mr. Robinson's way of handling his affairs with his audience, reminds one of the way the serious H. G. Wells creates his characters. We were thankful also for the "disjointedness"—a perfected method of being unmethodical, we found it. "Tis a way that intrigues some. That the book itself is not disjointed, however, but persuasive and provocative, may be worth our while to point out, and we shall not promise not to question its pessimism. Liberty we claim for two such commentaries, at the expense of standing corrected if our acknowledged layman's judgment of Mr. Robinson as an historian be inferior to that of the scientist.

What then is Mr. Robinson's theory of history? Again, a comparison with Mr. Wells obtrudes itself. The two agree that a threatened civilization must be met by more "mind" than the world has ever displayed before. They agree that the hope of this lies in intelligent education (a new kind according to them). History, according to Mr. Wells, is "a race between education and calamity." To Mr. Robinson, the findings of History are the most expedient spur for the former horse. What we must understand, he says, is that History has changed and that it has been due to a small number of seers "really groppers and monkeyers whose native curiosity outran that of their fellows and led them to escape, from the sanctified blindness of their times." Man alone can be thus civilized for he can do more than "grope and monkey." He can "ape." It is in this way that the human biological variation, the seer, unlike the unusually large rose in the garden, or the cleverest wolf in the pack, can modify somewhat the inferior members of the species who could have originated nothing for themselves.

But the seer in coming to his true perceptions and in influencing his fellows does so in the face of great odds. These odds are the burden of "The Mind in the Making." In his rehearsal of the extraordinary, slow, and hazardous process of modern civilization, Mr. Robinson tries to justify his starting suspicion of an idea in direct ratio to its term of acceptance; "the fact that an idea is ancient and that it has been widely received is no argument in its favor, but should immediately suggest the need of carefully testing it." A man must accumulate many findings in support of such a statement, or of the later allied conclusion which we here anticipate, namely, that the conservative, so far as he is consistent is fatally in the wrong, that the so-called radical is also almost always in the wrong but that he works on the right assumption, the assumption that the future has so far always proved different from the past.

Space forbids our following Mr. Robinson step by step through his evidence. We can give but the briefest resume. First of all, he gives a critical account of the mind of man, pointing out to the discredit of many philosophers that mind, "except for bodily processes, animal impulses, savage traditions, infantile impressions, conventional reactions, and traditional knowledge" never existed, that, in fact, the mind of civilized man has a four-fold foundation: the animal mind, the child mind, the savage mind, and the traditional civilized mind. These can be "transcended only artificially and precariously in certain highly favorable conditions." To study these mental heritages separately, as Mr. Robinson does, is to understand why man thinks as he does. Criticism is foreign to man's nature. As an animal, as a child, as a savage, as a victim of tradition, he is lethargic, suspicious of innovation, and afraid to eat of the tree of knowledge. Apart from a well-nigh omnipotent tendency toward reverie and the process of making a simple decision, man's thinking consists for the most part in what Mr. Robinson calls rationalizing, i. e. finding arguments for going on believing as we do. A few, however, our seers, really reason, indulge in that peculiar form of "creative thought", which leads them to change their minds, or at least to identify the results of rationalization with real reasons. An example of the distinction may be cited. At the beginning of the seventeenth century the various sciences of nature were largely masses of rationalization to suit the religious sentiments of the period. Since then, however, in this department of human thought alone, intelligence has been tested on a large scale. Dewey, Veblen, and Vilfredo Pareto have in the respective fields of philosophy, political economy, and general sociology, come to the conclusion that the social sciences are still based on rationalization, a discovery which future historians will probably consider one of the great contributions of our age. Departing from generalizations, the book now occupies itself with some of their sources, carefully selected from the pages of history. It dwells chiefly on our debt to the Greeks, the Hebrew Scriptures, the Roman Empire, the Middle Ages in general, and the Scientific Revolution. Just as in our own day the practical arts have got a long start compared with the revision of beliefs in regard to men and the gods, so it required about a thousand years for the Greeks who had accepted the industrial arts of the Mediterranean to make Athens an intellectual center. Their supreme gift to civilization was their discovery of doubt as the beginning of wisdom. But for a highly interesting reason the Greeks didn't go on as modern scientists have gone on. Greek civilization was conditioned by slavery and slaves could not devise the practical apparatus by which alone comes the increasing knowledge of natural operations.

Greek critical thought declined in favor of new uncritical beliefs from the East and our civilization of today is an outgrowth of that of the late Middle Ages. The life of the Middle Ages was dominated by religious and mystical thought. The word reason was erased and the word faith substituted. Reverence for authority was the keynote, even such a revival of the tyranny of the past as had dominated other societies and ages—in ancient Egypt, China and India.

The findings of modern science have shaken the hold of the sources of mediaeval authority, the Bible, Roman and Church Law, and the encyclopedic writings of Aristotle, but as has been pointed out, no such revolution has occurred in regard to the more insidious dictatorship of correct practice and belief. The Red today wears the mantle of the heretic of ante-inquisition days.

With the scientific revolution ushered in by Bacon, Galileo, Descartes, scepticism became again the beginning of wisdom. A great gulf between mediaeval thought and that which succeeded it was determined by man's ability to cultivate a kind of self importance different from that derived from his anthropocentric idea of the universe. "With a certain un-Greek practicality, the new thinkers descended from the magisterial chair and patiently fussed with lenses, tubes, pulleys and wheels thus weaning themselves from the adoration of man's mind and understanding."

How Scientific Knowledge has Revolutionized the world is the heading of one of the closing chapters of Mr. Robinson's book. The special fact which it brings out is the manner in which man has revolutionized his environment, habits of conduct, and purposes of life by inventions. This is one of the most astonishing things in human history. Escape though we may, and most of us still do, the information now available whereby man is for the first time in a position to have some clear notions of himself and his environment, we can't escape the fact that scientific inventions are constantly posing new problems of adjustment. Witness one of the most serious of these in the fact that just when the world was becoming effectively cosmopolitan in its interests, the modern industrial revolution, by means of facilitated communication, developed on such a stupendous scale.

What is the bearing of all that has been said upon the bitter issues of our present? To future historians, our obsession with business will seem as pitiable as that of the seventeenth century with Robinson's final word is a denunciation of our present philosophy of safety and sanity. Our problems must be tackled by education, either directly or indirectly. The direct way would be for educators to describe as realistically as possible the actual institutions of our time, but so long as our schools depend upon appropriations made by politicians, so long as colleges and universities are supported by business men or by the state, this is not to be expected. The indirect way, the way of Mr. Robinson, still remains. "Its great resource is History, the teachings of the 'Book of the Past'." For a recapitulation of the teachings of "The Book of the Past", one should read the closing chapter of "The Mind in the Making".

"Do not the conservatively-minded realize that their whole attitude toward the world and its betterment is based on an assumption that finds no least support in The Great Book of the Past. The great issue may, according to the period, be a primeval taboo, the utterances of the Delphic Oracle, the Inquisition, the geocentric theory, monarchy by the grace of God, witchcraft, slavery, war, capitalism, private property, or noble isolation. All of these tend to appear to the conservative under the aspect of eternity, but all of these things have come many of them have gone, and the remainder would seem to be subject to undreamed of modifications as time goes on. This is now the teaching of the unsealed book."

Is this pessimistic? All of the discoveries just named HAVE changed history, and civilization is young, we as a race being only five thousand years out of a savagery which had lasted for from one half a million to a million years. Mind is a matter of accumulation and we have the resources, will we but use them, to accumulate indefinitely. Calamity may at present seem to be the leading horse in the race with Education but is it pessimistic to spend such energy as Mr. Robinson has done in an attempt to spur the other horse?

Committee Avers Mission History Common Heritage

Certain public statements concerning the character of the Serra play and the fitness and integrity of its author and producer have been brought to the attention of the committee responsible for its organization.

The history of California is the common heritage of its people and challenges artistic and literary treatment. Absolutely accurate statements as to any event of the previous century are extremely difficult to make, as any candid historian will testify.

The Serra Play Committee has used every effort to secure cooperation from every one known to them who might be capable of giving skilled and sympathetic advice in the preparation of the play.

The committee gladly avails itself of this opportunity to reassert its confidence in Mr. Garnet Holmes as a proper producer for the play, and has ample evidence that he has used every reasonable effort to present the episodes involved with as close adherence to actual details as may be consistent with a finished literary and artistic treatment.

Would Bar Production of Mission Plays by Non-Catholics

Mission San Carlos del Carmelo,
July 19, 1922

Editor, Pine Cone:

Such a number of letters have come to me inquiring if the Mission Play is a Catholic play, and others taking it for granted that Church is the guiding hand in the production, that I have to ask you for a little space to state my attitude and thereby answer my friends.

As a Catholic priest and direct successor of Padre Serra in Catholic missionary work, I deplore the presumption of the writer and producer of "Serra" in attempting to present the great priest of our faith and founder of Catholicity in this state, as he can be neither mentally nor spiritually equipped to interpret the motives of a Catholic priest.

As a Spaniard and a member of the same race as Father Serra and of the people which the writer presumes to portray on the stage, I consider it a racial insult that a man who has never visited Spain, who is not even passably acquainted with the traits of the Spanish people, should select errors of history and faults in the character of my race to make Junipero Serra the great hero that he was, when there are so many noble deeds which gave both Serra and the Spaniards with him a glory that cannot be obscured nor denied.

In conclusion, it becomes my duty as the representative of Catholic interests on this Peninsula to say to the people who are members of the Catholic faith that a subject like the one in which "Serra" deals is a sacred theme that should never be handled by non-Catholics, agnostics, infidels or Jews, but always by fervent, well-educated Catholics, who are mentally and spiritually equipped and who will allow the hand of the Church to guide their efforts. It is not merely a historical, but essentially a religious and Catholic theme.

Thanking you in advance for your courtesy, yours sincerely

H. Bragg has charge of all publicity performances of the pageant-play "Serra." Bragg is noted for his publicity-getting ability.

Our old friend "Jack" Gribner has returned to his first love, the stage. He recently joined his old pal, Guy Bates Post, with whom he did the Richard Walton Tully plays.

Mrs. Meade Williams and her daughter, Mrs. Mott Porter, are in San Francisco from Tuesday to Friday. They went up primarily to see Frank McGlynn in John Drinkwater's great drama, "Abraham Lincoln."

From Boston comes the news that the students of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have dedicated their year book, "The Technique," to Dr. Alfred E. Burton, who for several years was dean of the institution.

"Alive and well" is the latest news concerning Sam Trotter, supposed victim of an auto accident down the Coast. This information comes from a gentleman who met and talked with big Sam in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. William Swain recently had as guests Mr. and Mrs. Elmer (Spitball) Stricklett of Mountain View, Miss Dorothy Vanderhurst and Raymond Swain of Pittsburg, and Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Schumacher of San Jose.

Mrs. Maude Arndt recently gave an enjoyable beach party for Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Hirst, who are staying at Mrs. Shipley's house on the dunes. After the supper the guests danced in the patio of the house.

As the chairman of the program committee of the Carmel Missionary society is endeavoring to secure a talented speaker from abroad, the date of the next meeting may be postponed from July 26 to August 2. So please watch for posters and announcements of this meeting.

The premiere public performance of Cator and Newberry's light opera, "Aladdin" is scheduled to take place in the Oakland Auditorium on Monday, August 7th. A party of Carmel folks is being organized to attend. The name of the opera may be changed to "The Beggar from Bagdad."

Carmel Little Theater work is again delayed by the necessity of offering the shares of stock, which are to be sold in order to build the theater, to old stockholders first. This has to be done in accordance with incorporation law. The old stockholders have thirty days in which to buy the shares. So, for a month, no actual work can be done.

Plans for the social hall to be built by the street are being remodeled. Instead of building a separate hall, the trustees plan to add rooms on to the back of the church building. It is the idea of the trustees that this hall be used for the boys' clubs, and for social events.

Charles F. Edson, father of Katherine Edson, who takes the role of Senora in "Serra," arrived in Carmel to play the part of one of the friars. Mrs. Charles F. Edson is already here. Mrs. Edson is head of the Commission of Women's Industrial Affairs.

When the new postoffice building is completed, Carmel will have a typical small town postoffice, first class in finish and of neat appearance. It has not been decided whether the upstairs will be used for apartments or for other purposes. The postoffice itself will be similar to that of Monterey, except that the lobby will be entered through swinging doors.

The little shop is to be in no way pretentious. It merely wishes to supply the every-day needs in things of its kind, in decorative and practical things. Janie Johnston is to be in charge. This alone will be of interest to many Carmelites. advt

Mrs. Isabel Bunting is visiting in Morristown, N. J. She reached there a few days before the big storm of June 11th, which did much damage to that section of the country.
